Lesson summary

Kailash Satyarthi is a social worker. He works very hard for the rights of child labor or children who have to work for money. These children don't get education and have many problems. Kailash Satyarthi won a Nobel prize for his hard work.

Kailash Satyarthi believes that solutions to problems of children cannot be found by talking about them. If children are not safe, there will be no peace and happiness in the world. A child is not a free child unless he gets enough food, sleep, time to play and learn. Every child must go to school and learn what he wants and be able to dream. Many times children do not get opportunities. They think they are born to work. Kailash ji believes that all children must get the right to freedom, health, safety, peace and education. He feels that there is a child in all of us. We must listen to this child march towards freedom of all children.
