

Lesson summary:

One day, a circus tiger escapes from his cage. He slowly walks along streets in a town. He is used to perform in a circus. People who see his performance are not afraid of him. Therefore the tiger thinks that men were fearless. As he walks down the street, people behaved differently. They run for their lives on seeing him. The tiger wonders why they are scared. He is not going to harm them.

The tiger is tired after walking. He enters a school. Children are excited to see him. But the teachers send children away. The tiger then enters the headmaster's room. It is cool there. So the tiger goes off to sleep. The terrified headmaster jumps to the loft for safety. The teachers lock the room from outside. When the tiger wakes up, he hears his master arguing with the teachers. They are not letting the master in. The tiger thinks that it is very unkind that teachers are calling him a brute. The story is told in the tiger's words.
